RECOMMENDED READING LIST
DEAR PARENTS, HOME SCHOOL TEACHERS

Kolbe’s Recommended Reading List began over twenty years ago with a list given to the Kolbe founders by the eminent classical scholar Dr. John Senior. In the intervening years it has been augmented by parents, teachers, and students, adding numerous titles in nonfiction as well as fiction. It has been adopted by schools and used by teachers and parents as a reliable guide to good reading material. With this enhanced version, it is necessary to thank Mrs. Maria Skrobola for her generous additions and help.

This compilation of reading materials represents some of the best writings in prose and poetry, either in their original English language or in translation.

In recommending materials for your student, caution and prudence must be exercised. The suitability of a book often varies according to the age and maturity of the student. The books listed in the “Kindergarten and Under” category are suitable to be read to your child, as most children this age are unable to read themselves. Furthermore, although this list provides reference material for the student outside of the classroom curriculum, consultation with a teacher or parent as to the suitability of a title is certainly expected of the student.

An author’s name appearing on our list does not automatically imply our full endorsement of all the works by the author; nor does it suggest that the author’s personal lifestyle, religious convictions or political viewpoint are in full accord with our academic criteria and moral vision. It is our duty as educators to represent authors whose influence on literature is indisputable, although we steer clear of materials that serve no constructive purpose for our educational goals.

For obvious reasons, we cannot list all the great books that have ever been written. It is the parent’s responsibility either to venture into other titles by authors whose primary works we have listed, or weigh with judgment and care those titles that have been left off for good reasons.

We sincerely hope that the list serves as a guidepost for good reading outside of the classroom; such reading is a strong indication that the student is advancing in academic preparedness and personal judgment.
